THOMAS DUNNE'S SLAYER.
CENTRAL OFFICE DETECTIVES CLAIM TO HAVE CAUGHT HIM.

He is One of Two Prisoners Arraigned at Jefferson Market This Afternoon—That Trading of Hats Furnished the Clue Upon Which the Officers Worked—The Men Remanded for Examination.

Inspector Byrnes and his detectives—Hickey, Lauer and Van Gorkum—appeared at Jefferson Market this afternoon with two prisoners, whom they had arrested for connection with the affair in which Thomas F. Dunne, of 65 Broadway, had his skull fatally fractured on Sunday night.

The prisoners were Henry A. Breden, aged twenty-seven, of 65 First street, Williamsburg, and Harris W. Horner, aged twenty-six, of 105 South Ninth street, in the same city. They were arraigned and remanded for examination.

The detectives failed to give any information concerning the arrested men, or to state which of them is supposed to have given Dunne the fatal knockdown blow.

Dunne was twenty-five years old, a broker's clerk, and was a member of a First Ward organization known as the Gorilla Club.

In company with D. H. Driscoll, of 46 Henrick street, Michael Donovan, a telegraph operator at 16 Broadway, and James Head, another young fellow, all members of the Gorilla Club, Dunne went out on Sunday afternoon.

Talk of Reducing Salaries in the National League.

The baseball magnates of the country began their third day's session at the Fifth Avenue Hotel this morning, with nearly all the representatives in attendance.

A sensational report emanating from Philadelphia to the effect that A. G. Christy, an amateur baseball manager of that city, representing a wealthy syndicate, had offered the present Directors of the Philadelphia Club $100,000 cash down, for all their right, title and interest in that club, was the subject of no little comment in the hotel corridors.

Mr. Christy is in town, and was seen, but he refused to say anything whatever regarding the report, except that it was premature. The Philadelphia League representatives professed ignorance.

It was stated, however, that the offer had been instantly rejected, and that there was no danger of the Philadelphia Club's passing out of the hands of John J. Rogers and Al Reach.

The report of a deal-back in the meeting last night over the proposition to abolish the office held by John J. Rogers, as legal counsel to the League, with a salary of $2,000 a year, was confirmed by the meeting.

Four of the clubs voted in favor and four against, so that Mr. Rogers will continue to hold office.

WORDS OF PEACE.

By Emperor William in His Speech to the Reichstag.

Details of the Credit for Purposes of Defense Not Given.

Convinced the Principles of Imperial Unity Are Popular.

BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION.
BERLIN, Nov. 22.—The Reichstag was opened at noon to-day.

A religious ceremony at the Cathedral the members proceeded to the White Salon of the Royal Castle, where the Emperor delivered the speech from the throne.

The Emperor began with home affairs. He alluded to his tour through the Empire, which, he said, had convinced him that the principles of imperial unity had taken deep root in the entire people.

The following is the text of the passage of the speech in reference to foreign affairs: "Our African settlements have interested the Empire—the task of winning over that continent to Christian civilization."

The friendly Government of England a hundred years ago recognized that the achievement of this task must begin by repressing the slave trade.

He said: "As a precious legacy of my grandfather I take up the task of social political legislation. I do not indulge in the hope of thus banking from the world the distress and misery of mankind; but I consider it the duty of governing powers to take measures to alleviate the same, and by organ institutions cause love of one's neighbor to be recognized as the duty of the State as well as of a public community."

A Startling Array of Disappearances in This City.

People Who Have Completely Vanished of Late.

What Has Become of Franklin T. Hadlond and Thomas Verren?

A Paragraph Announces a Disappearance and the Curtains Falls.

Vanished in a great city. Hundreds of people disappear every year. A paragraph appears in the daily papers announcing that they are lost, and unless they are people of much importance that is the last ever heard of them by the public.

Where are they? The police of this city are now looking for Franklin T. Hadlond, a wealthy druggist of Kansas City, who closed up his business some time ago and came to New York, ostensibly to be treated for some mental malady.

Hadlond is from St. Louis heard from him several times after his arrival here, his letters being written from the Union Square Hotel.

He left his wife behind him in St. Louis, but for the last three weeks she has heard nothing from him, and as he appears to be in a nervous and depressed condition of mind when he went away, she fears some ill has befallen him, and has asked the police to assist in obtaining some information regarding him.

No trace has yet been discovered. The disappearance that was only made public yesterday, is that of Mr. Thomas Verren, a lawyer, whose office is at 64 New Street, and whose friends have not heard from him since Oct. 10, when he left for his office.

There was a wild panic at the First Ward School at Hunter's Point this afternoon. Eleven hundred little children, alarmed by fire, made a wild dash for the doors, in their fright and terror sweeping their teachers with them in the rush.

In the twinkling of an eye several hundred men and women, the parents of the children, were on the scene calling for their little ones.

Then the fire engines came rattling up, the shouts of the firemen and clanging of bells lending to the confusion.

Cries of terror came from the struggling mass of children as the smaller and weaker were trampled underfoot.

When the tumult began to quiet down the injured were picked up by their parents and the police and were carried to their homes.
